CCRM hubs (Canada, Australia and Nordic) have joined together in an International Regenerative Medicine SuperPitch to offer a unique opportunity to pitch for local and international venture capital firms and investors.

The International Regenerative Medicine SuperPitch VII offers expertise and investment possibilities for translation and commercializing regenerative medicine and related projects. Regenerative medicine includes technologies and therapies that regenerate or replace injured, diseased or defective cells, tissues or organs to restore or establish function and structure.

Submissions may relate to cell therapies, gene therapies, combination therapies, gene editing tools, enabling technologies such as vector production, automated analytical assays, biosensors, novel media, and other projects related to regenerative medicine in a wide range of therapeutic areas. We welcome submissions from or affiliated to Canada, Australia, or the Nordic countries.

The International Regenerative Medicine SuperPitch VII allows companies and researchers to showcase their technologies or ideas and receive expert feedback and commercialization support from the CCRM hubs for suitable projects, and further development funding.

Shortlisted applicants will be invited to provide a forty-minute presentation, which must include objective data on their technologies or ideas, to a panel of regenerative medicine, venture capital, and commercialization experts from the consortia.
